

STORY OF HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT

The curtain rises on "The House That Jack Built" in a clearing of the forest, the abode of Mother Goose (Mrs. Cooper) and her son Jack (Watson Ballentyne). A band of Fairies, Grass Blades and Sweet Peas discover the queer little house just as the good mother comes out and bids Jack go hunt for the golden eggs laid by her famous goose.

These little strangers hide while she awaits his return with the eggs, which she names Humpty Dumpty and carefully locks in the house, hanging the key outside as she unfolds to Jack her plan for a wonderful party to which all of her children are to be invited, and then dispatches him with the invitations, while she goes to market to buy the goodies.

It happens that the Blackbirds have also overheard the plan and, being angry that they are not to be invited, determine to spoil the party by stealing the key. The arrival of the Knave of Hearts (Mr. Widemann) enables them to accomplish their purpose, for this light fingered fellow easily steals the key and hides it.

Mother Goose scarcely gets home and discovers her loss before the guests begin to arrive, and she is compelled to tell them her troubles, also to receive and entertain them out of doors. This does not prove half bad, and a gay fete follows, each guest of prominence being received with a chorus, and the curtain goes down on a gay scene of merry making.

The second act represents the evening of the same day. The guests weary of their frolics are resting on the grass when they are surprised to receive a communication from the Man in the Moon.

Their chorus of greeting is scarcely finished when the sound of trumpets announces the approach of Old King Cole with his pipe and bowl bearers and fiddlers three. The reception of this distinguished guest is one of the prettiest parts of the operetta and is followed by the arrival of the Queen of Hearts, who has promised to make some of her famous tarts. Her reception is equally impressive, but at this juncture the revenge of the Knave of Hearts and the Blackbirds is complete, for it is remembered that the Humpty Dumpty (eggs) are locked in the house and the key is gone. The Fairies tell who stole it and a search is at once made and the culprits brought in. A trial is held before Old King Cole who sentences them to be made into Blackbird pie! The captives plead for mercy, expose the Knave and are finally released on the condition that the key be found. This is readily done. The Humpty Dumpty are brought out, the tarts are made and everybody is happy again, the scene closing with dancing and song for the entertainment of Old King Cole and the Queen of Hearts.

Japanese-Germans.

Two of the young cadets on the German training ship Herzogin Sophie Charlotte were born in Japan. They are Wilhelm Fiska and Carl Lehman, whose mothers were Japanese women. Both are about 18 years of age and left Japan when six years old, to be educated in "the Fatherland." They are German subjects, of course, but naturally have an interest in the land of their birth. Hawaii Shinpo received a call from them and we were happy to make their acquaintance and offer some Honolulu entertainment.—Hawaii Shinpo.

Custom House Mascot Returns.

"Prince," the fox terrier mascot of the Custom House, has returned after an absence of a month. About a year ago he was adopted by one of the officers and has been the pet of the place ever since. His owner was travelling through here to the Orient in the Coptic about a year ago. The dog seemed to like the climate here and decided to stay.

His owner by adoption did not find out where the dog came from until several months after the ship and owner had departed.

Japanese Liked Him.

Ex-Manager Ahrens was given a grand send-off when he left Oahu plantation. The Japanese laborers saw him go only with the greatest regret, for he is known to them as a fair-minded manager, whose treatment of them has always been considerate and kind. "Like a light taken away in the dark night," is the poetic way in which some laborers described his departure. The ex-manager has gone to Hilo, where his family went a short time ago.—Hawaii Shinpo.
